

2015 level 1 third question

Dear Javier

What a shame that you're not happy with your new life in NZ! Before you moved you were really excited about all the possibilities. You were really looking forward to it and you were really chatty, impatient and a bit ambitious with your ideas about having a girlfriend and being in the best team in your school in the first week. I can't believe that you're shy, anxious and that you don't go out.

I think that you need to try to talk with your parents about your problems. I'm sure that they are going to understand you if you explain what is happening, your lack of friends and how you feel. Your parents have always expected much more from you. Do you remember last year?

Also, maybe, you can play football with Paco and his friends because Paco is only a year younger than you. You can begin with this team that isn't serious and in that way you can be in good shape when it's important.

And don't say anything to me about Manola! I can see in Facebook photos of her new boyfriend. She promised me that she wouldn't go out with another boy and that she was going to wait for me. I found a job for saving money and I was wanted to buy an air ticket to visit her next summer. She has broken my heart.
